Technology centre wins €3m funding

THE Energy Technology Centre in East Kilbride has won €3m (£2.6m) funding to develop and showcase sustainable building products and systems. The funding will enable the centre to develop and test a number of sustainable building products and designs including low energy construction products, lighting, heating and power systems. It was awarded under the EU's Regain programme, to promote the development of four sustainable building demonstration centres in Scotland, Wales, France and Belgium. Liz Connolly, regional director of Scottish Enterprise, said: "The centre offers an unrivalled platform to develop, test, demonstrate and showcase a range of renewable energy technologies and the Regain project will enable companies in Scotland to access a range of opportunities throughout the five-year project and help take indigenous sustainable products to market."
